German satire magazine Titanic once bribed one of their officials with a ham for their vote. They wanted to make a joke, but the World Championship tournament actually went to Germany.

USA is a democracy ?

USA is full blown capatalism.

Everything is BIG in the Super Market, full of preservatives and artificial colours.

They do not pay taxes or care for each other in house. But somehow, they think they can do whatever to other countries.

Putting up a costal blockade was essentially a declaration of war. But you're right, no official declaration.

permalink save parent report reply

[–] ChicoGuerrera -2 points an hour ago

When was defending your country ever a declaration of war?

permalink save parent report reply

[–] Aurori_Swe 4 points an hour ago

It became a war when they actively invade and bomb a country, and it's a declaration of war to impose blockades on another country. Bombing random boats in an ocean is not "defending your country"

Social media was weaponized to such a detrimental degree and now here we are.

permalink embed save parent report reply

[–] Tim1980UK 14 points an hour ago

It's just scary that so many people have allowed social media to brainwash them. It's like people can't think for themselves these days.

permalink embed save parent report reply

[–] i_tyrant [score hidden] 5 minutes ago

The brainwashing hasn't worked nearly as well on the rest of the world, but us Americans are special.

And by special I mean, our education system was completely gutted over the course of 40 years so of course it worked especially well on us.

You can blame corporate interests and Russia and China and whoever else, but most especially blame the GOP. They gleefully pursued this and Project 2025 is a literal play-by-play of how to lobotomize your populace so you can work against them every step of the way and they'll love you for it.

If we're ever gonna survive this shit we have GOT to take power back and get money out of politics. The corruption has sunk so deep the villains think they're invincible...and if we don't act they'll be right soon enough.

[–] FormerWrap1552 4 points an hour ago

Blaming social media is a lazy copout. It's decades / centuries of devolution through greed and ignorance. Belief in spirits and ghosts as well.

Once a living being has created everything they need to live, we see what we have here. They rob and steal from each other pointlessly until we bridge that gap.

[–] mossylin [score hidden] an hour ago

Cool, but also ignoring social media's huge hand in the polarization of people is also an arguably bigger copout. Reactionaries are rewarded with money, fame, and positions with influence. People will rationalize anything and everything now all under twisted reasons. You realize that social media has sped these processes up as well, right? Incredibly quickly as well.

permalink save parent report reply

[–] FormerWrap1552 [score hidden] 52 minutes ago

Social media is just like the press, newspaper. It's an inevitable thing that exists and won't stop existing. The biggest issue with social media is the manipulation by companies and individuals for personal gain. But, that happens everywhere in capitalism.

Blame people, they're the reason social media is used the way it is. People praying on other people for profit.

I disagree it's even close to the same copout, doesn't make much sense really. Also, I never said any of those things. I just said it's a lazy copout, which it is... And I see it as the most repeated blame for today's issues when it's not even in the same ballpark as education, greed, religion etc..

People literally voted for a felon rapist, who incited a insurrection in the capital of usa. These problems run much deeper than "blame sercial merdia"

Make using our brains to think cool again.

permalink save parent report reply

[–] mossylin [score hidden] 38 minutes ago

Surely blaming people instead of the companies like Twitter that allow and reward garbage bullshit to be posted and spread around will help! It's almost kind of like anti-intellectualism is so promoted and prevalent on social media that it affects education and makes people unable to think at all... Algorithms being manipulated to show polarizing content is surely not the social media company's problem! Not at all! Because the PEOPLE definitely have all the control over it! Yes, people should be using their brains, but they won't because it's too entertaining and effortless to have your favorite Twitter/Instagram/Facebook political commentator moron give you your thoughts FOR them. People like Joe Rogan or Theo Von have huge followings and those aren't just entertainment value ones. They have had real effects on our political plane.

People will find justifications for their votings for Trump on social media. And religion? We have morons like Nick Fuentes, self proclaimed Christian Nationalist, who has a huge and growing following because of social media and the rise of 'clip farming' to go even more viral.
Yeah I fucking hate the "social media BAD" cliche as well but it comes to a point where, yes, it is fucking horrible now. It isn't 2015 anymore...

permalink save parent report reply

[–] theNikipedia [score hidden] 56 minutes ago

So you mean social media only has truth? I'd say social media has definitely been weaponized

permalink save parent report reply

[–] FormerWrap1552 [score hidden] 27 minutes ago

There truly are some full on believers out there, and trump is the second coming to them. They were about Jesus before, but after Trump, they feel Jesus should be deported from their hearts. Cause there is no way to read the teachings of one, and live with yourself if you follow the teachings of the other if you actually believe.....

Also, when I say they were about Jesus before.....maybe I'll rephrase that. They used Jesus to claim others were going to hell, and that they were sinners and bad people not destined for heaven. Allowing them to distance themselves from them, and treat them as less than. Now they just use race or indifference to their archaic beliefs for society to justify their feelings.

Yet now is exactly what that amendment was supposedly for, this is the reason y'all were fine with sacrificing innocent American children's lives all of these decades, so you could rise up at this exact moment.

Venezuela has the largest oil reserves of any country in the world. Controlling their oil makes the US's oil more valuable. Also the United States has a long history of regime change targeting socialist governments.

Venezuela nationalized their oil production in the 70's and this was a major factor that led up to the Iran-contra affair and Reagan getting elected president. Trump idolizes Reagan because he was actually popular and was a driving force behind this steady collapse America finds itself in today.

Its not about the US running out of oil, it's about geopolitical power that comes with controlling the biggest oil depot on the planet.

It means Russia, China, Iran and many Middle Eastern nations (saudis, qatar, etc) lose a significant chunk of their power and leverage.

With the "side effect" of removing a horrific regime.

Now of course this might backfire immensely, but in the case of success? Could potentially be huge upside.

I remember every redditor posting in Feb '22 that russians should rise against Putin altogether or they are genetic-slave-mentality-subhuman-asiatic-savage-orcs unlike freedom-lovin'-tyranny-fightin'-westerners.
Any attempts at explaining what the power balances are and how revolutions actually work were met with blank dead silence as if you were conversating with a wall. I don't believe that an average Joe in US or Europe or anywhere else what is considered to be "First World" is actually comprehending how much blood and sweat was invested into every little liberty they enjoy. He can say some buzzwords like "resistance" or "struggle". Sometimes something smart like "logistics" or "military industrial complex" is leaving his mouth. But internally, I'm afraid, they just parrot what they heard somewhere else like robots and don't really try to attempt to draw a whole picture. Literally shutting down when you try to insert anything contradicting to previously implanted in their brains.
Such zoned-out-of-reality population can't hold any personal independence from the state for much long since they don't even posses the ability to realise what that independece is and how to exercise it.

Actually, we want to, but who is going to be the first one to lead? It's not easy at all. There's a huge risk to being the leader of leading a country-wide riot. You will be taken away and arrested very quickly. Then, there's also the people who will have to face against the armed police and military. At the same time, they will easily shutdown utilities to your house. So you don't have running water and electricity. While that is going on, they will stop deliveries to grocery stores, which will result in a mass panic buying and food and supplies run nearly short or empty.

That's just a short list of what they will do to prevent a country-wide riot. This is why it's extremely difficult. We all want it. We really do. But we are not prepared enough to face against the consequences.

Martial Law. That's what's keeping people from staging an uprising. Trump is foaming at the mouth waiting for an excuse to declare Martial Law and people know this, just like they know an uprising would hand him the perfect excuse. After watching ICE literally drag people through the streets and then those people disappear, it's expected that military rule would be more of the same on a bigger scale. And with no civilian legal system in place to do anything about it. So it's fear. Right or wrong, it is what it is. People are angry, they hate what's happening, but they're terrified of suffering the repercussions of doing anything about it.

If we were a smaller country it would be easier. I mean from coast to coast we are talking over 4K miles in distance. Not to mention most working Americans are not in a position where it is safe to revolt. We have no platforms to try to organize against the regime, we know that people are being silenced on platforms if they say the wrong things, our news sources are heavily controlled. We also have to deal with a president who has threatened its own military against its people, ice is a big issue as well. Already taking citizens and any possible person who looks like they could be an immigrant. It's really not as easy for us to revolt as it is with other countries. We need to revolt but Americans are stuck at work bc otherwise we would be homeless. We know our country doesn't care about any of us working people. How do you suggest an estimated 170 million people together? You also have to consider the people who voted for this would be easily convinced to attack the other half who would try to revolt. It's not an easy task and one that can't be taken lightly.

So what should the people of Venezuela do to be freed from their dictator that they already voted out of office years ago.

[–] NorgesTaff [score hidden] 34 minutes ago

If they are unhappy with their government then over fucking throw the regime - it's not a novel concept and has happened at one time or another in just about every country that exists and will probably have to happen in yours again if you eventually want to get rid of the fascist regime you voted in. There are a bunch of ways they could do it, including peaceful mass civil disobedience and general strikes. The people almost always have the power if they choose to use it.

The US is not bombing Venezuela to rescue its citizens from the dictatorship and you know it.

The US has supported or created dictatorships all over the world. The key is that the dictatorship needs to be aligned with the US. Then a dictator is even desirable.

Saddam, Pinochet, Mobutu. Saudi Arabia, Iran. You name it drug routes do come through venezuela somewhat, but if this was about controlling drug routes, it would be going after colombia.

this is about oil and showing the world that the us is willing to invade foreign countries and steal from them and it probably won't face global consequences

permalink save parent report reply

[–] deadflowers5 2 points an hour ago

If they were concerned about drugs, it would be China and Mexico that would be invaded. That is the route fentanyl takes into the US. No one is worried about cocaine and crack anymore. I doubt the US elite is concerned about fentanyl either. It's not like they treat drug addiction with universal healthcare like Europe does.

permalink save parent report reply

[–] other4444 3 points an hour ago

Do some research then. Most of the drugs come from Columbia, which is America's bff in South America. The precursors to fentanyl comes from China then made and transported from Mexico by the cartels. Again, Venezuela has the world's number one oil reserves. This is 100% about oil.

Anyway, I did no research but I feel like there is probably a microchip in every vaccine to track us and Venezuela can't fight a conventional war with the US so instead they're working on a way to hack the microchip using 5G to explode our hearts. Maybe the drugs you had a feeling about are being used to weaken our hearts to make it easier

Then, when America is weak they will invade and release the giants that the government is keeping in area 51 to begin the rumbling like in attack in titan. I know it was an anime but something about it just makes a lot of sense to me so I think it could happen for real. Like, why was Trump obsessed with the wall? Hell, who knows if he will even remember it tomorrow. There is a big difference with being against something and being against something but accepting it because not accepting could be a nuisance in everyday life. I don't see alot of protest in the USA against Trump. Sure US people here on reddit are loud against Israel but can you speak up against the leadership of your own country and actually do something. That would be lot more helpful than blaming the jews.

Not on reddit, that does nothing. This time it's not about a country far away from you. This time it's your responsibility to do something outside of Social Media. If you start bombing another country? Nothing.

You don't see what's happening in Portland, LA, Chicago? People are not just accepting it, and there's plenty of people speaking up. Is it as many as I would like? No. But to act like no one's trying to do anything is ignorant.

Paradoxically all the reliable news is online. Real catch 22 that). A lot of what I assume are edgy teenagers would like me to do more than protest, but they've also never read about like any revolution ever. You can't just like overthrow a system of governance with no backup plan. That's literally never worked, and it REALLY wouldn't work in a country as geographically large as the US. We'd end up as the Soviet Union. (No, I don't mean Russia.) Look, I'm sorry, but all that's really in my individual power is to protest, vote, and try to help as many people as I can. Anyone who says differently has read too much fiction. And I get it. Like I want to shake people who live in despotic governments and be like why don't you just wake the fuck up. But the reality is that everyone is already awake. They know. They just can't individually do anything about it.

Venezuela nationalized foreign oil interests illegally. So people did what civilized people do—took them to court. Venezuela agreed to restitution which they've largely but not completely repaid. It was all fairly simple and straightforward. But Trump is going to use it as a pretext, hence his rage tweeting about stealing oil and property etc. I mean, I wouldn't be surprised if he doesn't know this was arbitrated already because he doesn't care. Someone, a Stephen Miller or Pete Hegseth, put a bug in his ear and got him all hopped up. But he's going to learn that"regime change"is a fast pass to unpopularity. W couldn't sustain Iraq for even a few years and that was after 9/11 and riding a huge wave of popular support and national unity. (Not saying Iraq wasn't bs just that he used 9/11 as pretext.) If you can't sustain support for a war based off of legitimate (for the populace)national security fears of another terrorist attack, you sure as hell aren't going to be a hugely unpopular president who is going to war over the oil industry losing refineries that they already received money for. No (rational) person is buying it's over "narcoterrorists" already. It's like he skipped from 2003 right to 2006 in Selling a Foreign War to a Wary Population.

I hate them because 30% of them are evil and have decided to take over the country to spread more evil to the world and the 70% remaining are to cowardice to be willing to make any sacrifise whatsover to stop them. But the price that 70% are going to pay for their cowardice will be so so heavy, they have no idea yet.

It's different types of oil - US refineries can't process the stuff from the US without a major overhaul - they needed the crude stuff from Canada, which has become more expensive due to tariffs (and the Canadians being pissed off and selling elsewhere) - so now they want to steal it from Venezuela.

Whatever else anyone says about the US getting involved in Venezuela, it's almost certainly not because of oil. Not only are we quite flush with oil ourselves, but if anything, it's to further give US govt and corporations a better foothold on regional power for the real oil that sits next door in Guyana, which is a much higher purity, larger reserves and easier to extract than Venezuela's filthy oil.

"It's literally an invasion?" Why do you dorks on Reddit talk with so much certainty about things you clearly know nothing about? It's very clearly not an invasion force. It's obvious it's some type of strategic raid or operation targeting something. You guys were on here bitching and crying when we struck Irans nuclear capabilities last year saying it's ww3 and we're all going to die. The hyperbole here is insufferable!

Sure, it's just a "Special Military Operation" 🙄

permalink save parent report reply

[–] baffle430 1 point an hour ago

7 explosions and a few helicopters with what is likely a strike team is not an invasion… when Russia invaded Ukraine they attacked with almost 200,000 people. That's an invasion… this very clearly isn't. Everyone can calm down

There's at least 9 Chinooks there that we can see, so likely a battalion strength force, at least. When the US invaded Afghanistan, what was the initial force size?

Russia would need to step up their game and roughly do not twice as more killing, not three times more killing, but 15 times worse than what they're currently doing to reach your numbers.

So if you think their 15k deaths in 4 years is worse than all America did in last 80 years...my man you've been affected by propaganda more than north Korean school kid.

The Venezuela war crimes and escalations are fucked, but you have no idea what you are saying economically. Do you really think homies are giving up YouTube, android, google, Microsoft, Amazon, Apple, Netflix and Uber because of a war that doesn't affect them. And if they did you really think it matters to the 90%+ self sufficient US economy? Brain dead take.

Trump has a ~19-20% share of Rosneft paid to him as a bribe in 2016. Venezuela nationalizing their oil industry will undercut Russian oil which is already suffering and cut into his income.

Why? They're literally Nazis.

Do you know who Steven Miller is?

Have you missed the number of actual Neo-Nazi tattoos on the bodies of people in the White House this year?

Have you missed the intentional repetition of Nazi talking points and Nazi speeches?

Some of these people are the literal children and grandchildren of Nazis.

They've joined up with the children and grandchildren of Klansmen and other White Supremacist groups for expediency, but they have been very very clear about what their shared plan is regarding race and eugenics.

permalink save parent report reply

[–] vau1tboy [score hidden] 43 minutes ago

I want to push back on this. I know who Steven Miller is, yes. He may look like he belongs in a nazi uniform but ironically the man is very Jewish. He says racist things but while every Nazi is a racist, not every racist is a Nazi.

Who has neo nazi tattoos? Like honestly I have never heard this.

I agree if you actually listen to what Hitler said in his speeches they sound eerily similar to trump and this white house's speeches.

I have never heard that anyone in the current admin is a descendent of a nazi. But I also haven't looked that up.

You're going to have to explain that last one. I have also never heard that. I work in the news so I have to keep up with everything so it's not like I'm not paying attention.

Honestly, I don't think he's like Hitler or the Nazis. They were really smart at how they seized power. However, I do think this admin is very much like the Mussolini regime. He was a pomp, arrogant narcissist who wanted people to love him for the manly man he was. Mussolini was an interesting man in history. Really, look into him. If you like history you'll love learning about him.

permalink save parent report reply

[–] TheSwearJarIsMy401k [score hidden] 37 minutes ago

You should spend more time looking into Stephen Miller. His Judaism has not prevented him from embracing Nazism. He went to school with a Jewish friend of mine who lost her shit when she first saw him on television during Trump 1.0 and told us all about him.

Videos of him from that era discussing his beliefs have since circulated, and he has not changed them.

You should also google those tattoos.

Hegseth has a big one on his chest. I'm sure you're aware of its older Crusader origins, but you are clearly unaware of its more modern connotations and those of the associated phrase Deus Vult.

You're in the news? Not much of a journalist. Sound tech? Copy editor?

Lol Hitler ripped his ideas from US segregation policies. We've always been like this. No but seriously I said that not because I don't think the US is Authoritarian (although I am able to talk freely to you, so that's something, and also a way things are different this time around) but because I don't think it's Authoritarian in the same ways. Trump is way more Mussolini than he is Hitler, but also the billionaires are a complicating factor and not at all like Germany. Germany committed genocides and attacked Poland because it was in an economic depression and people were starving in the streets. We're doing it for shits and giggles. It's more like Colonial violence than it is straight Hitler. They have oil, we want it. We don't want the land, we don't want the people, we want the resources. Compare it to Great Britain maybe. That time when we went to war with Spain?

We can’t. Our guns are weaker than the military and law enforcement weapons, our prison systems are largely built for profit so if you do anything out of line you get locked up for life. Our elected officials are all sycophants or lack the power and authority to illicit change.

We are trapped in our own little worlds where everyone is just trying to go to work because they are one or two paychecks away from absolute poverty and losing everything.

They’ve got us all caught up in our day to day that they are playing games around the world we can’t even fathom.

If the Venezuelans respond the USA will declare it's an attack of aggression even though it's the USA attacking their country and all Trump needs is a casus belli or reason for war. Venezuela can't possibly win a war against the USA nor can it respond with attacking. If it attacks our bombers or naval ships the USA will simply have a justification for committing atrocities and even extermination campaigns as they have done in Iraq and Vietnam.

If Venezuela doesn't want to suffer from what the USA did in Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic, Haiti in the 1940s-1970s or Nicaragua in the 1980s or Guatemala etc et al in the Banana Wars. As ever the USA promises extermination and destruction… what hope is there? Breaks my heart for the people and the USA is causing the suffering of Venezuela and that's because we've had an embargo, sanctions and now bombings on a country that has not declared on the USA or invaded its territory. Have the USA no sense of decency? No sense of history? Do they think this war will be any different than Vietnam? Iraq? Afghanistan? How many wars have begun like this and ended in decades of occupation?

from an american, i am SO SO SORRY. i am 17 and know fully well this isn't because of "drug cartel" from venezuela. trump wants money and oil. if he was worried about drugs, he would find a way to stop the import of drugs from the top importing countries in the world, which aren't venezuela. it's unbelievable that this is happening. i'm incredibly disappointed in my country for voting this guy in. it's pathetic.

So what would Trump's reasoning for this be (again, I know there is NO valid reason for this) but like what's the excuse for this? I'm curious. What led to this? The drug boats?

Oh well that's the truth of the matter but I'm just wondering like what people think his BS excuse will be. Thank you for the reply!

The theory I've seen floating around here is that Trump wants to start a war to justify not holding elections, because if Ukraine can cancel elections during war, why can't Trump?

Now obviously, Ukraine Constitution allows Zelenskyy to not hold elections during war time.

The US Constitution says no such thing. But obviously Trump doesn't give a shit.

There is multiple factors at play it's not just solely oil

Yes, but if Venezuela didn't have huge amounts of oil it wouldn't be getting bombed right now.

The main take from Venezuelan oil is to impact China

If you can't see the clear evidence that American elections have been tampered with, you're willfully choosing not to see.

It absolutely was. There's plenty of intel proving so. The people who investigate these things were fired immediately after his inauguration.
